JFK RECORDS MISSING: Many records dealing with President Kennedy's assassination in 1963 in Dallas have disappeared from the district attorney's office in New Orleans, site of Clay Shaw's trial on charges he conspired in the assassination. That trial was the subject of the 1991 movie JFK. Shaw was acquitted in 1969 and died in 1974. The prosecutor, Jim Garrison, died in 1992. District Attorney Harry Connick told the Assassination Records Review Board that Garrison's office once had five file cabinets of records, but many of the documents can't be found.
